A photograph taken from a high angle looking down a long, sloping roof. The roof is covered with dark grey or black waterproofing material that has a repeating pattern of a fish-like logo and the text 'TYPICAL'. The material is held in place by rows of red plastic fasteners. On the left side of the roof, there are several large stacks of roofing materials, including bundles of shingles and boxes. In the distance, a person wearing a bright yellow safety vest is standing on the roof. To the right of the person, there are more stacks of materials. The background shows a residential street with a paved road, a grassy area, and a large, light-colored commercial building with a loading dock. Trees and a clear sky are visible in the far background. In the foreground, a hand is holding a piece of brown cardboard with handwritten text.
