As a result, the number of cases of AIDS in the United States has increased exponentially, from 1981 to 1990, and continues to rise. The CDC has been instrumental in coordinating the national effort to control the disease, and has been instrumental in the development of the AIDS Memorial Quilt, a project that has helped to bring attention to the disease and to the people who have died of it. The CDC has also been instrumental in the development of the AIDS Memorial Quilt, a project that has helped to bring attention to the disease and to the people who have died of it.
