

A photograph of a roof surface covered in dark grey asphalt shingles. A large, irregular square hole has been cut into the roof, revealing a dark interior space. Two long, light-colored wooden planks are positioned diagonally on either side of the hole, likely for structural support or as a temporary barrier. The planks show natural wood grain and some knots. The hole is roughly square but has jagged edges where the shingles were removed. The surrounding shingles appear slightly worn and aged.

Permit # 47417